Fall Among the Hemlocks

Had to get back to the forest. It was a windy day but worth the try. Loved the feeling of being small in a large forest.

Waves and Rocks

Painted from a sketch done on Monhegan Island. I remembered the wonderful sound of the waves hitting the rocks. I just had to relive the experience and paint it larger.

Tide Coming In

I was drawn to the constantly changing movement of the water.

Birches on Lake Superior

On a warm sunny day in September the beach was deserted. Rick and I had the whole shore to ourselves.

Sunday Afternoon in the Woods

Leaves were crunching underfoot on this wonderful painting day. This painting seemed small among the large hemlock, birch and maple trees in this woodlot behind the Log Cabin Gallery.

Birch Trees and Bunchberries

I loved the bunchberries that I saw on the ground underneath the birches. It was late afternoon on a sunny day in Quebec.

Sinclair Cove, Lake Superior

I loved the change in scenery along Lake Superior. Here the cove has the rocks plunging into the water. Just down the coast was a lovely secluded sandy beach.

Mom's Geraniums

My mom has some geraniums on her property. I just wanted to capture the dancing quality of the flower on a summer afternoon.

June Lupines

I sat one morning in a field of lupines. This is the perfect painting day - sun, lupines, ocean breeze and my paints.

Shasta Daisies

Daisies are a favourite flower of mine. I saw these at my parent's home on Oak Point.

Waves at Lobster Cove

The waves were crashing against the rocks out at Lobster Cove. Spent a great day sitting on the rocks and painting with my sister.

Late Fall Among the Birches

Painted over two days in this lovely dense birch forest in Campbellville. I had to go back to finish the painting the second day because a fog came in and changed the view.

Spencer Creek Spring Thaw

I painted this while Rick was collecting samples of the water for research, further upstream. It was a great sunny day to paint outdoors with the temperature just above freezing.

Saint Jean Baptiste Day, Charlevoix, Quebec

There was a family flying a blue kite on the beach this windy day. Quebec flags were flying all over Baie Saint Paul.

Monhegan Harbor

First day out painting on the island. We had just come off the boat at the dock and it was about to rain. My sister Chris and her friend Anne painted with me.

House at the Cove

My sister and I sat in a little cove overlooking the wonderful house built on the rocks. I loved the strength and independence that the house showed, reminding me of the rugged life of the islanders.

Orchard Cottage, Whale Cove

I loved the 200 year old cottage that we stayed at on Grand Manan. You could feel the remembrance of summers' past as the screen door squeaked.

Crescent Lake

I just loved the way the light hit the far side of the lake as it turned a corner. Painted while on vacation with Rick at Lake Superior Provincial Park, September 2003.
